"The Resurrection Makes It Real" // Romans 6:1–5 // Easter 2019

Death has been defeated! Amen!

2 sentences, uttered by an angel, that changed the course of history: He is not here. He is risen, just like he said.

I love Easter for a lot of reasons--one is that this is the one week of the year my mom gets to dress me for church--but another of them is because it is one of the two times a year I don't have to actually think about what I'm going to talk about. Everybody in here knows what the message is going to be about today.

- (In fact, if you're one of those people who only come on Christmas and Easter,
- First, I'm really glad you are here--it can take a lot of courage to walk into a church
- Second, I can partially understand why you may not feel compelled to come back on other weeks.
- You're like, "Well, every time I go he preaches on the same thing.")12

We actually talk about a lot more throughout the year, so you should check it out, but the core of it is what we celebrate today: Christ actually came, just like all the prophecies said he would. He actually lived, actually died, and actually resurrected from the dead; and he was seen alive by hundreds of witnesses who went around the world testifying they had seen him even at the cost of their lives.

At the center of Christianity is not a new moral code or a new perspective on life, but an empty tomb that literally changes everything.

- I did hear about one young pastor (true story) who decided that if this was the only weekend certain people would ever come (and it's true, 50%!), he was just going to tell them everything they need to know about Christianity in one queen-mother-of-all sermons.
- He preached for 90 minutes. True story. It was a junk drawer sermon: little bit of this, little bit of that.
- The next year, Easter was the lowest attended Sunday of the year.

So, I'm not going to do that today. I'm going to stay on script. I'm going to talk about the resurrection and what it means for you.

BTW, we've already had a number of services this weekend--first was Wed on CH campus. Room filled to capacity. Told the students it was earliest Easter service I had ever been a part of. Jesus hadn't even died yet. ***People kept saying, "He is risen, he is risen." And I was saying, "not yet, not yet." 15 professions of faith.

This isn't like discussing Avengers: Endgame. There are no spoiler alerts here. Everybody knows what the message is going to be about today. Some things are just predictable: death, taxes, and the guy who beat death and we talk about it every single Easter.

At our church, we're studying chapter by chapter through the book of Romans and it worked out great because where we are at the place in Romans where Paul talks about the resurrection of Jesus and the difference that it makes.

So, if you brought your Bible, open it to Romans 6. If you didn't bring a Bible, then I'm going to have to ask you to leave... j/k. On the screen.

- Y'all, I love Easter because it's the perfect time for many of you have been considering becoming Christians to actually cross that line of faith.
  - (Some of you have been reading books, talking to people, watching messages on TV, and today you say, "OK, I think I have this thing figured out. I'm ready." Today's the day.)
- But it's also the perfect time for those of you came in here totally closed off to Christianity to reconsider some things.
  - You didn't come in searching: ayou came in with both feet on the brakes, the emergency brake pulled up; door locked and double-bolted; you're like "no way; not now, not ever"
  - Truth be told, you're only here because the guilt trip your mom would put on you if you skipped church Easter is too much for any mortal to bear;
  - o or you're here because that girl beside you is super cute and this is the only place she'd let you take her out;
  - maybe you are honestly not even sure how you got in here—a friend invited you to go grab something to eat/breakfast and next thing you knew you were walking in here.
- But you are like "no way": You have seen hypocrites; all kinds of harm in name of religion; difficult questions

- Tonight, I want to present you with something that might make you reconsider some of your objections.
- You see, Easter has the potential to be an "end around" our objections.<sup>3</sup>
  - Think about it—if you knew Jesus raised from the dead, wouldn't that make you reconsider your objections?
  - I told our congregation that I had this realization in the midst of a lot of my own doubts: if Jesus appeared to me and told me... I'd be willing to punt some of those objections even if I didn't have a good answer for them because I'd seen something that proves there is an answer.
  - And so I plunged myself into investigating whether there was sufficient reason to believe Jesus really raised from the dead; sufficient reason to believe he was who he said he was.
  - And I found out that there was.
  - That led to one of my favorite definitions of faith: Faith happens when the unexplainable meets the undeniable.
  - o If the resurrection is undeniable, then it changes your discomfort with the unexplainable.
  - o Make sense?
- Some of you pride yourself on doubting--are you willing to doubt your doubts? Are you willing to say, "This question is difficult, but if Jesus raised from the dead, I'm sure there is an answer."
- BTW, if it makes you feel better, evidently even the original disciples apparently had some of their own unanswered questions. One of the most interesting verses in the entire NT is Matthew 28:17, right at the end of Matthew's Gospel.
  - Jesus has gathered everyone on the hillside after being with them for 40 days following his resurrection. He's talked with them, eaten with them, showed them his nail scars.
  - He brings them out the Mount of Olives and gives them the Great Commission to carry the gospel to the ends of the earth, and he begins to ascend to heaven.

- Matthew 28:17 says that when the disciples saw all this, "Some worshipped, but some doubted." Doubted? "He'd been DEAD for three days, and then he hung out with them for nearly 3 months and now he's FLOATING in the air in front of them...and yet some still doubted! (I saw that David Blaine special)
- Why? Their questions were so difficult and emotionally complex (they had been under Roman oppression for 100 years; how was Rome still in charge?) that even in light of the amazing things they'd seen, they still struggled.
- You have those?
- But they learned to trust him, not because all their questions were answered, but because they knew he had raised from the dead!
- Bottom line: You're in good company if you have objections and questions--so did the some of the Apostles!
- So, my hope today is that many of you might reconsider your own questions and doubts and objections in light of the certainty of the resurrection. To doubt your doubts.
- To suspend judgment on some of the unexplainable in light of the undeniable.

So here's what I am going to do today. I'm going to show you how Paul in Romans establishes the resurrection as the foundation of everything.

Already in these 1st 5 chapters, Paul has explained that the resurrection proved 2 things to him he had not always accepted:

- First,that Jesus was who he said he was: Romans 1:4, "(Jesus) was declared to be the Son of God in power... by his resurrection from the dead." (Obviously, the resurrection didn't make him the Son of God; it just proved he was).
- Second, in Romans 4:25 Paul says that the resurrection shows us Jesus' death accomplished what he said it accomplished. He says,
   "He was delivered over to death for our sins and was raised to life for (because of) our justification." IOW, the resurrection is the proof that the cross worked.

The resurrection proves Jesus was who he said he was and accomplished what he said he accomplished.

- Paul previously hadn't believed either of those things--in fact, he was vehemently against them.
- But he changed his opinion on these things in the space of about 7 minutes one afternoon.
- What caused the change?

He had seen the resurrection with his own eyes!

- (Y'all, sometimes we lose the amazingness of this conversion in the 1st century.
- #1 enemy of Christianity became it's biggest proponent, instantaneously!
- And in so doing, he walked away from all kinds of prestige, and power and promise in the Jewish community where he was a rising star to become a poor, persecuted Christian who was subjected to numerous beatings, spent more time in prison than he did free, and died by beheading!
  - I am not sure how even to make a modern comparison. Imagine Coach K holding an emergency press conference tonight announcing that after a short personal retreat in the mountains, he's announcing he's now a committed Tarheel, and he is resigning from his position as head coach at Duke and returning all the money he's ever made there, and has taken a job as a waterboy for UNC's team or anything else Coach Roy has for him. What had he seen?
  - That's silly, of course, but even if it were true, that would be 1/1000th of what Paul's transformation cost him.

You say, "Well, I wish I could see Jesus with my own eyes like Paul did--that would settle my doubts."

Yes, but you have his testimony.

 What else but encountering something real would have made caused that kind change?

One religious historian pointed out that when someone is teaching something they know to be false (and that happens), you will always find that what they are teaching is gains them money, power, respect--Did Paul gain any of those things? No, the opposite! But he kept on testifying because he was convinced that what he had seen was true!

In addition to that, we have the testimony of all the other Apostles, too.

- We know that every single one of them was tortured or went to a martyr's death and not one of them ever went back on their testimony.
- The idea that this was some kind of myth that sprang up as the Apostles exaggerated Jesus' claims is crazy. They were martyred for that confession. The resurrection wasn't an add-on to their message, it was the center of it.
- And the idea that they were willing to die (and to watch their friends and loved ones die) for something they knew to be false, or at least weren't sure was true, is crazy.
  - Chuck Colson. Special counsel to President Nixon, and one of Nixon's inner circle. When Watergate broke he and about 10 other men met secretly, came up with a story, and swore to maintain it. Toughest and most powerful men in the world!
  - He said within 3 weeks everyone caved.<sup>4</sup>
  - Then he says, "You're telling me (a dozen uneducated, untrained fishermen could maintain a lie under duress and torture for) 40 years (without a single one of them caving)? Absolutely impossible."

<sup>4</sup> "I know the resurrection is a fact, and Watergate proved it to me. How? Because 12 men testified they had seen Jesus raised from the dead, then they proclaimed that truth for 40 years, never once denying it. Everyone was beaten, tortured, o BTW, one of those who would not stop preaching and ended up dying a martyr's death was Jesus' own younger brother, James! (Actually, half-brother means...) Let me ask: How many of you grew up with an older-brother? What would it take to convince you now that he was actually God the whole time? (You say, "The incarnation of Satan, maybe...")

So, Paul says, "The resurrection proved to me that Jesus is who he says he is and his death accomplished what he said it accomplished."

(Before we leave this and go on to chapter 6, what about you?

- Willing to let the resurrection make you doubt your doubts?
- You pride yourself...
- What would it take?)

Now, in chapter 6, Paul explains one other thing that the resurrection shows us about Christianity, which might be the most convincing proof of all:

The resurrection means the gospel is power. The gospel not just another competing theory of religion, he says, a new way to live or a new and improved set of morals.

The gospel is actual life-giving, heart-regenerating power, and the proof of that is the way it changes lives.

Paul said, "First, the resurrection changed my mind about Jesus. Then, it changed me!"

Chapter 6 begins with a question: 6:1 What shall we say then? Are we to continue in sin that grace may abound?

stoned and put in prison. They would not have endured that if it weren't true. Watergate embroiled 12 of the most powerful men in the world—and they couldn't keep a lie for three weeks. You're telling me 12 apostles could keep a lie for 40 years? Absolutely impossible."

- This is a natural question the reader of Romans has at this point, because for 5 chapters Paul has been arguing that salvation as a free gift that comes to all who will receive it.
  - Every other religion in the world operates on the premise, "I obey, therefore God accepts me." And that's your motivation to be good. He's making a list and checking it twice...
  - The gospel flips that on its head—it says, "God has accepted me, therefore I will obey." God has accepted me by a free act of grace.
  - All I have to do--all I can do--is receive it, like a gift.
    - Last Thursday I went on a mission trip to the DR. Guy in our church: What time is your flight? 5 am. One of these 6 million miler guys. "I want to tie you to my account and use my status to upgrade you to FC."
    - What could I do? I had only to receive it. If I had said, "No, no, I insist on using only my own status..." then I'd be stuck back there in the cattle car (with the rest of the Summit team).
    - All I could do was receive it!
    - o He gave up his points; I got his status
    - Jesus offers to give you his status, but you have to receive it as a gift.
- Well, Paul knows that raises the question, then: If Jesus paid it all, isn't like we now have this divine visa card with an unlimited balance--that we can flash whenever we want--that we can just flash whenever we want?
- And in an even sicker twist, Paul says, some say maybe, if God gets glory by showing grace, maybe our sinning just gives him more space to be glorified!

Paul's answer: 2 By no means! Btw, this is the strongest way of saying 'no' in Greek. (I have a friend who, when he's asked to do something he really doesn't want to do, will say, "Do you want a simple, one-word 'no,' or do you want the deluxe 'two word' edition? Heck no. This is Paul's 'heck no...') How can we who died to sin still live in it?

Now, what does Paul mean that we have "died to sin"?

- Well, it doesn't mean we have lost all interest in sin, or that we are slowly moving away from it.
- Two reasons we know that:
  - First, "died" here is in the past tense. We're already dead. It's not something happening to us, but something already done.
  - Second, in chapter 7 Paul will explain that the Christian can indeed still be tempted and even seduced by the power of sin.<sup>5</sup>
  - o So, it doesn't mean we've just lost interest in sin.

No, what Paul means he explains in vs. 3: Do you not know that all of us who have been baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into his death? 4 We were buried therefore with him by baptism into death, in order that, just as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, we too might walk in newness of life.

- When we accept Christ, we "die to sin" in 2 ways:
  - o First, we renounce it once and for all.
    - The picture of this, Paul says, is baptism. Which is why one of the questions we ask people say when they get baptized is, "Will you follow Jesus, going wherever...?"
    - This is called "repentance." Repentance means literally "a change of mind," an "about face" toward sin.
    - o Bumper sticker when I was a kid: "God is my co-pilot"
    - And then we put you under symbolically, showing you have renounced sin.
    - (If this didn't happen at your conversion then your conversion is not legitimate.

- Sometimes people think praying a prayer saves you.
   People in every religion ask God to let them into heaven.
- Just believing in God doesn't save you. The book of James says even the demons believe, and tremble.
- Going to church and getting involved doesn't make you a Christian. My youth pastor used to say, "Going to church don't make you a Christian any more than going to McDonald's makes you a quarter pounder with extra cheese."
- Conversion begins in repentance. Surrender. Did you surrender, and does your life show that?
- I don't mean that a Christian would be perfect, but a Christian is someone who has unequivocally renounced sin and their life proves that.
- o So, that's the first way we die to sin: we renounce it.
- Second, saying we are "dead to sin" means that through his resurrection, Christ has destroyed the reign of sin in our lives.
  - When we accepted Christ, Jesus poured the power of the resurrection in our hearts.
  - Again, this is pictured in baptism: You go under the water showing you are buried with Jesus, and then come out, showing that his life is becoming ours.

And because of that, Paul says, we have access to Christ's resurrection power over sin.

- See the next verse says? 5 For if we have been united with him in a death like his, we shall certainly be united with him in a resurrection like his.
  - "United" is a horticultural term, like where you'd take branches off of one tree and graft them into another tree.
  - When you accept Christ, the Spirit takes the dead branch of your life and grafts it into Christ's living root and his life starts to flow into you.

So, follow the logic: If we renounced sin through our baptism, and it's dominion over us was broken by the power of resurrection, how can we continue willfully to practice it?

- If we do willfully continue to practice sin, that means we were either insincere in our repentance or God's resurrection power has never come into us. (PAUL ASKS, HOW CAN YOU ENCOUNTER)
- Make sense?
  - I've told you before that in college a couple of my friends lived in a house off of campus which was the nastiest place I'd ever stepped foot. They never did dishes.
     Cat not in litter box. When Mary came, it smelled like roses and clorox.
  - If I'd been greeted by the odor, I'd say, "No way. If Mary had come, this place would be different. Either you never opened the door to her or the woman you let in was not Mary."
  - That's what Paul is saying. If we willfully continue to practice sin after becoming a Christian, we either were insincere in our repentance or God's resurrection power has never come into us.
- Paul asks: How can you encounter something as powerful as the resurrection and not show its effects?
  - O Illus. Say you are out in the parking lot and your little Honda Civic has a dead battery. got a Ford 250 (with big battery), and you, said, "Well, first i want to see if it is giving off power," so you attached both pos and neg nods to your tongue, and you were like, "Yep, it's giving power," we'd say, "Nope... if you really did that, we'd have seen some effect." You'd walk different. Your hair would look different. You'd talk different.

If we willfully continue to practice sin, that means we were either insincere in our repentance or God's resurrection power has never come into us--and you are not really saved.

Listen: Your confession of faith has to be more than words or some little prayer you pray or some ritual you go through--walking an aisle, praying a prayer, joining a church. Your confession of faith is surrendering to Christ as Lord, receiving his free offer to save you, and letting him bring his resurrection power into change you!

So, here's my question:

Have you experienced its power in your life, and does your life show that?

According to Paul, the resurrection is not just a fact of history past; it is power to make new in the present.

- The gospel, he says, is not a new philosophy to live by, a new set of moral regulations, or new resolutions to do better. It's about the infusion of resurrection power.
- The gospel is not about turning over a new leaf, it's about receiving new life.

Personally, I'm tired of seeing Christians who think of the Christian life as simply ascribing to some creed and trying to be a decent person.

• The gospel is about power. Raw, life-changing, heart-starting power.

At the center of Christianity is not a new moral code or a new perspective on life, but an empty tomb that literally changes everything.

(MUSIC)

It declares:

Death has been defeated

And that means:

- Guilt has been defeated
- Injustice has been defeated
- Addictions have been defeated
- Sorrow has been defeated
- Despair has been defeated

Listen, if Jesus raised from the dead, that means,

• Guilt doesn't have the last word in our lives.

- You've made a lot of mistakes--if we knew them all, you think we wouldn't want you in here. Probably right. And you wouldn't want to be in here.
- But Jesus took the full penalty of our sin on the cross so that there is no more condemnation for those of us who are in Christ Jesus. 2 Cor 5:17.

• ...injustice doesn't have the last word.

- O Yes, we live in a world where unfair things happen.
- But the resurrection shows us that God is going to right all wrongs and restore 1000x more than you lost, and even redeem those bad things for joy!
- o If Jesus rose from the dead, that means injustice doesn't have the last word. God has the last word.

...addictions don't have the last word.

- Maybe you feel like a captive to your sins.
- o In the resurrection God released a power on earth that destroys all the powers of death.
- o I'm not saying it's a quick and easy process--you may struggle every day for the rest of your life.
- I'm just saying that in the resurrection is THE promise of ultimate healing and the motivation to get up tomorrow and keep pressing forward.

...sorrow doesn't have the last word.

- This world has been described as a veil of tears where we watch everything we love eventually fall apart—everything departs at some point: our families, our bodies.
- Maybe you've experienced the death of a loved one; maybe a child.
- Maybe you've watched someone with Alzheimer's in their last terrible days.
- The resurrection shows you that that kind of pain does not have the last word.

- JESUS has the last word. Going to a place where God wipes away every tear, binds up every wound, restores what is broken.
- ...Despair doesn't have to have the last word.
  - o Listen, as long as Jesus is alive, there is hope for you.
  - As a friend of mine says, If you're not dead, God's not done.
     He can still redeem you!

The empty tomb means death doesn't have the last word!

- Isn't death the thing we fear the most? It was for me. Bc Jesus raised from the dead, I no longer fear death--the best is yet to come!
- I love this quote by Billy Graham: "One day you will hear that Billy Graham is dead. Don't you believe it. I'll be more alive than ever, I will just have changed addresses." (PIC)

The resurrection changes everything. It changes people. Just think about the change it made in those first Christians.

- Paul was harsh and abrasive and a bigot--even a murderer, but his encounter with Jesus made him a man who considered himself the chief of sinners and the bondservant of the church.
- Peter was a coward--but his encounter with the resurrected Jesus transformed into a man of courage, the rock on which Jesus built the church and who would one day die crucified, upside-down, for his testimony.
- The Apostle John was arrogant and vengeful--but his encounter with Jesus led to him being the Apostle most known for his beautiful and tender expressions of God's love, who gladly submitted to torture and exile so that others could come to know that love.
- Several of the prominent women in the early church had very scandalous pasts. Some had been oppressed and abused. Some were prostitutes and some were demon possessed. But their encounters with Jesus made mighty women of courage, beauty and strength.

And now, speaking from 2,000 years ago, Paul says through the ages, he can change you, too!

4 Therefore we were buried with him by baptism into death, in order that, just as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, we too might walk in newness of life.

So, have you experienced its power?

- Not: have you prayed a prayer or decided to be more spiritual or be a better person or get back in church?
- But have you been born again? Have you received Christ into your life and experienced his power in your heart?

You can today. As I said toward the beginning, you have to receive it like a gift.

So, let me be clear:

- The gospel is that you are condemned under sin. Look at the last verse in chapter 6, which we'll get into more next week: Romans 6:23 For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord.
- wages: there are two ways to pay for sin. You pay for it yourself; Jesus pays in your place.
- gift: has to be received.

To be saved means you stop trying to earn your way to heaven by being good enough, going to church enough, and just receiving his free offer to save you.

 You stop trying to do and accept his done, surrendering yourself to him.

You ready to do that? You can today.

- Every head bowed: "God, give me the courage to do what I need to do." (Pray for them).
- Raise hands if need to be saved

Come forward to receive Christ
